INTRODUCTION It is agreed that the birth of Accounting was due to the necessity of the owners of the capital of knowing the magnitude of their patrimony, and the results of their business. Through time, the entrepreneurial enterprise reached considerable levels (then enterprise and capital owners) noticed the convenience of getting capital from third parties, to finance the development of their enterprises, with the objective of obtaining a growth of their benefits. This differentiation process of managers' concept (enterprise owner) and financier (capital owner) went on acquiring relevance to such a point that, at present, the owners of the capital of big enterprises are absolutely separated from those who are in charge of the ones making the decisions in the management of the enterprises.
